INTERNATIONAL

The public interest group "Justice Coopération Internationale" (JCI, Justice International Cooperation) brings together the French Ministry of Justice, the French Court of Cassation (judicial supreme court) and the Council of State (administrative supreme court), the French courts, the École Nationale de la Magistrature (national school for the judiciary), the École Nationale de l'Administration Pénitentiaire (national school for penitentiary administration), the Conseil National des Barreaux (national bar association), the Conseil Supérieur du Notariat (high council of the French notariat) and the Chambre Nationale des Huissiers (national chamber of bailiffs). Its objective is to develop legal and judicial cooperation through multilateral cooperation programs implemented by the European Union and other international donors such as the World Bank or the International Monetary Fund (IMF).

The École Nationale de la Magistrature (ENM) has cooperation agreements with the high councils and schools of a dozen countries (Albania, Brazil, China, Spain, Italy, Lebanon, Poland, Slovenia, Taiwan, etc.). It leads aid missions in numerous countries of Africa, Latin America, Asia, and continental Europe. It also creates training centers for judges and prosecutors, designs educational programs, and coordinates customized training courses in foreign countries.

LAW

Civil law (or Romano-Germanic law) is one of the world's great legal systems. It and common law both owe much to the French legal system.

Many countries throughout history have modeled their legal systems on French law. Studying law in France affords many international students an opportunity to examine the roots of their home country's legal system whereas students from common law countries become acquainted with the major facets of the "other" legal system.

Legal education in France emphasizes critical analysis and fosters questions about what law is, but also what it should or could be. Therefore, the knowledge students acquire leads them to think critically about law. Over time, the rule of law has been changed, transformed, and replaced. Of course, understanding it is critical, but equally important is being able to interpret it, analyze it, and critique it. This makes it possible to assess the scope of new laws and to understand their stakes.

The French approach to legal studies prepares students for legal careers (lawyers, judges, clerks of court, etc.), as well as for administrative or management careers in the private and public sectors, or any other profession requiring an ability to understand legal, administrative, or human resources issues. Such careers may be in France, but also of European or international scope.
